THE LEGISLATURE REVIEWED

NOVEMBER 7 1874

To the Editor of the Oregonian

The Legislative Assembly lately in session at Salem is taken altogether the best the State has had for many years—meriting the least censure and deserving the most praise As a body it is free from suspicion of corruption or dishonesty and there is scarcely a member to whose acts at that session taint attaches And this alone is a great deal to say of a legislative body in the United States during the last dozen years

The lobby was there in usual force but almost powerless in influence and wholly so for jobs The consequence was it retired with empty hands instead of full ones as heretofore and not only so at the session of two years ago So far as I can learn no direct job of any kind—I mean to use the language of the lobby a job with money in it—met with favor at the hands of the Assembly

A commendable spirit of economy and reform was manifested on the part of nearly all of the independent members and a goodly number of those of the two old parties A good many reforms were accomplished, and a good many failed from one cause and another—mostly from the lateness of the hour at which they were attempted No new abuses were created and some of the old ones were corrected More would have been if more system in work had been observed The Committee on Retrenchment and Reform struck at the most of them and reported a good many recommendations and bills cutting them off but at so late a day that, with the opposition parties interested were able to array, they were mostly defeated The mistake of that Committee was in not when they uncovered an abuse reporting it at once with bill Instead, they waited till their work was done and included all in one report. Then it was at the heel of the session Every abuse had one or more persons enjoying its fruits, and interested in perpetuating it Besides Democratic partisans were generally in possession of them as that party held the State offices and a few members of that party in the House threw every obstruction possible in the way of repeal, while the large Democratic minority in the Senate at the last acted mostly as a unit in defeating the repeal of any Democratic perquisites or plunder The extraordinary pay attaching to the Secretary of State's office La Grande Land District Governor's Private Secretary janitor &c were retained mostly in this manner the time being too short to pass the repealing bills in the regular way, and the Democratic and personal minority being strong enough to prevent the suspension of rules The bill reducing the salary of State Librarian is reported to have failed for lack of the signature of the new President of the Senate Colonel Cornelius

The two great leaks of the treasury Lunatic Asylum and Penitentiary remain The first was slightly reduced The public attention has for the first time been aroused to the inside workings and costly management of the latter And that was all accomplished in those respects

A bill much needed was passed reducing fees of Clerks and Sheriffs It is well as far as it goes but should have covered fees of all officers and in many instances fixed the rates lower while some fees are retained which should have been abolished And the offices in the larger counties should have been salaried I hear that some of the present incumbents complain, but let not the public or future Legislatures be deceived The offices in all the leading counties are still very lucrative and whenever there is a change of rates it should be downward

As a whole the Independent members of the Legislature amply vindicated the wisdom of the people's movement in electing them and it will be fortunate for the State if it shall for the future be largely represented in all its departments by vigilant honest men owing allegiance to no party Their presence in the present Assembly vastly purified legislation besides saving many thousands of dollars to the treasury CITIZEN

LETTER FROM EUGENE.

Eugene City, Nov 6 1874

A terrible case of suicide occurred here last night Sol. Kuhn a toy and tobacco merchant was found in his bed this morning with throat cut It seems from indications in his bed room which was adjoining and connected with his store that he first made the desperate attempt to take his own life with a small dagger by stabbing himself in the breast, and not being able to accomplish the deed with that instrument he got out of his bed went into the store room to the show case, took a razor out of it went back to his bed and cut his throat from ear to ear He could be tracked by the blood from his bed to the show case and back again showing that he had failed in the first attempt and had gone into the store room for a more deadly weapon The small dagger was found on the floor near the bed, with the point bent, which indicates that it had struck a bone when he stabbed himself in the breast. He was found in his bed with his night clothes on lying on his left side and the razor near him He was evidently insane In the evening about 10 o'clock, he went into Mr Saxon's saloon, which is the next door to his store with nothing on but his pants and undershirt and requested Mr Saxon to loan him his pistol saying he wanted to shoot some cats Saxon informed him he had no pistol and he dodged out of the saloon instantly Those who saw him in the saloon say he had a wild, desperate look but they did not suspect the desperate deed he was then certainly contemplating Mr Kuhn was a Jew and of a lively, jolly disposition when in company, and no one would dream from his appearance that he ever thought of committing the awful deed he did last night He was doing a nice little business in his store and seemed to be contented and satisfied He had been complaining for a few days of being ill with a bad cold and headache but was around attending to his business all the time

Adelina Patti's Diamonds and Husbands.—I overheard a lady at the opera, the other night talking about Adelina Patti's costumes They are the most elegant on the stage and she such gorgeous dresses, such strings of diamonds and ropes of pearls In the saloon scene in La Traviata she wears her dress and hair trimmed with diamonds instead of camelias I do not doubt the diamond part of the story but think it very bad taste. The point of the dress is the camelias As to the elegant costumes, I doubt that for friends of mine just returned from abroad say that although Patti wears quantities of jewels she is very careless about her dresses and that she wears one old satin skirt that is flimsy and grimy with age and dirt Worth who makes the most of her dresses complains that the Marquise de Caux is very economical Notwithstanding her economy in the matter of dress, she gives freely where she takes a fancy I know for a certainty that she allows a young American girl in Paris $600 a year to pursue her musical studies She only values a present by its worth in dollars and cents I am told that at Christmas time she is the recipient of gifts from hundreds and hundreds of admirers but that she only keeps the jewelry from among the lot everything else she tosses over to her maid Mme Patti and her husband live very happily together an unusual thing in similar marriages The old Marquis goes to the opera every night when she sings and sits down in a retired corner and never takes his lorgnette off his wife while she is on the stage When she retires he turns his back to the foot lights and rakes the house through his glass If there is anything in Mme. Patti's singing or acting that does not suit him he tells her so when he goes behind the scenes and she does better next time Such a husband is worth all the critics in the world Patti knows very well that what her Marquis tells her is for her good while a critic may suggest or cavil out of some unfriendly feeling In the meantime we are no nearer hearing this great singer in our own country than we were five years ago To she finds it more profitable to pay Mr Strakosch a large amount of money every year until such time as she shall conclude to sing to fulfill her contract.—Corr Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

The Salem Statesman of Saturday says "The usual quiet of Eugene City was disturbed on Thursday evening last by a fracas in which a well known citizen of that county named Al Hembrie received an injury from the effects of which he has since died He was in the city and had we are informed, been drinking some. While standing in front of a saloon another party named Chas Brundt who claimed that Hembrie owed him a small debt came along and, without the least warning struck him a powerful blow with his clenched fist just below the right ear Hembrie at first paid no attention to it. He was leaning against the building at the time, and he gradually slid down until he reached the sidewalk After considerable delay he was taken into the saloon where restoratives were applied, and he recovered sufficiently to mount his wagon and drive home a distance of four miles The spectators gave it no further thought until yesterday when news reached the city of Mr Hembrie's death shortly after his arrival home

The Eugene Guard gives the following particulars of the death of Sol. Kuhn who committed suicide at that place on Thursday night of last week Mr Jones who was assisting deceased in his store came down on Friday morning unlocked the store went in and was preparing to open up when Mr Bettman came in and asked where Kuhn was In company they proceeded to his sleeping room in the rear of the store and on opening the door were horror stricken at the sight Everything was covered with blood He had been troubled with bleeding at the nose at night and it was at first supposed this was the cause of his death An examination, however revealed the true state of affairs His throat had been cut leaving a most ghastly wound, which commenced near the left ear and extended to a point about midway between the windpipe and the right ear everything being cut to the neck bone There were found in or near his bed a bowie-knife about a foot in length, a small dagger and two razors all more or less besmeared with blood. From the bed to the show case in the front room were traces of blood and also in the show case and it would seem that he first attempted to take his life with the dagger and then went to the show case and got the razors

THE INDIAN POLICY

A Washington dispatch of October 25th says

The pursuit and punishment of the Indians who have left their reservations and committed acts of hostility during the past summer has compelled large numbers to come in and surrender their arms, even their bows and arrows thus rendering themselves almost powerless for evil in the future, and has had an excellent moral effect in the impressions made on the minds of those occupying the reservations Although attended with great expense, it is believed by those best acquainted with Indian affairs that the effective military operations provoked by Indian outrages during the early part of the present season will in the end prove to have been judicious and in the interest of true economy and will have the effect to diminish Indian depredations and outrages on the frontier The policy which has been recently pursued toward the Indians is not, it is claimed a departure from the President's Indian policy but rather a more extensive execution of his original plan—putting the Indians on reservations under the civil authority of the Government and leaving the ones who persist in leaving the reservations for the purpose of marauding to be dealt with by the military It is confidently expected by official authorities that the experience of the hostile Indians during the present year together with a more efficient control exercised and maintained at the agencies, will go far toward suppressing hostilities on the part of the Indians for many years to come Meanwhile the whites are filling up the territory now subject to raids and in a comparatively short time the Indian problem will be solved by the presence of whites in sufficient numbers to make it impracticable for them to go upon predatory expeditions While the work of civilization educating and Christianizing will continue the hope is expressed that the wild Indian may yet become an industrious and intelligent citizen, contributing to the development of the natural resources of the country which he now occupies.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH BY A SERVANT

The Paducah Kentuckian, of Oct. 4th, gives the following account of the performances of a fiendish house servant

Some weeks ago a woman calling herself Bridget Malhony applied to Dr Jackson, of Columbus Kentucky for the place of cook Employment was given her, and for a short while she gave satisfaction. A few days ago the doctor noticed some irregularities in her life and notified her that she must look out for another home This appeared to infuriate her beyond control—the pent up devil in her nature burst forth in a fury of passion that sent the doctor scampering for the police, and the family for an asylum of safety When he returned Bridget had departed leaving his mirrors and furniture a wreck It appears that, from a mistaken kindness, she was not prosecuted but allowed to depart unmolested From his residence she went to the hotel or boarding house kept by an estimable German Catholic named Switzher near the M and O Railroad She easily imposed herself upon the good nature of this lady, and was permitted to stop there paying her board in work She behaved badly again and Mrs S discharged her Instead of going off, however she went up into Mrs S.'s room (it was immediately after breakfast) and sent for this lady from the dining room. When she got into her presence she commenced to abuse her in a most shameful manner Mrs Switzher tried to quiet her and expressed sympathy for her Bridget told her that she had better sympathize with herself and made at her Mrs S rushed down stairs leaving her three children consisting of a little boy four years old two daughters aged respectively six and ten in the room The oldest says that the two children were in the bed with the musquito bar fastened down around it and that Bridget deliberately took the lamp and saturated the bed and children with coal oil and fired it

Before assistance could reach them the passage was a solid sheet of flame, and the two children were burned, with the house and most of the furniture The fiend is in prison and the poor mother nearly distracted with grief at her terrible loss

ITEMIZED DAMAGES

[From the Chicago Tribune]

The most remarkable feature growing out of the Beecher scandal, which has yet come to light is the motion made by Beecher's counsel that Tilton shall be compelled to furnish a bill of particulars of the damages which he charges in his complaint It would seem as if the original cause had been presented in sufficient detail for Mr Beecher to understand every particular of it and what every particular was worth If he does not understand it who can? He ought to be familiar enough with the subject to reduce every item of damage which he has occasioned down to the fraction of a cent There has been no one so familiar in Mr Tilton's family as he and no one is so well acquainted with the manner in which it is charged that Mr Tilton's home was broken up He is an expert and thoroughly competent to testify If the matter were left out to public arbitration the arbitrators would probably settle upon a bill of items somewhat as follows

H W B to T T	Dr
For loss of home	$60 000
For loss of newspaper position	4 000
For loss of time	13 500
For general worry	1,500
For loss of membership in Plymouth Church	000
For loss of wife	000
For loss of Beecher	000
Total	$100 000

This we take it covers the details of Mr Tilton's losses which he represents in the aggregate at $100 000 It is on the whole a shrewd device on the part of Mr Beecher's lawyers for if he can compel Mr Tilton to present his bill in detail, they can offset it in detail and wipe out the whole sum as follows

T T to H W B	Dr
For one ragged edge	$10 000
For one cave of gloom (large size)	10 000
For hypochondria	10 000
For humbling himself	10 000
For narrow escapes from death	10 000
For Tilton being a better man	10 000
For Mrs Hooker's intentions	10 000
For torments of the damned	10 000
For the Life of Christ being knocked higher etc	10 000
For services of Mutual Friend	10 000
Total	$100 000

The Daily Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING NOVEMBER 9, 1874.

BE KIND TO THE STRANGER.

Every steamer from San Francisco brings to this port a number of immigrants. The number is, as we said a few days since much larger than people generally suppose. In the course of a year it amounts to several thousand. Besides these, some come overland from California and some by the Boise route.

Oregon has made no provision for receiving these strangers. They come among us knowing neither the people nor the geography of the country. Most of them, having come hither because they were not getting along satisfactorily in their former homes, have no means to waste in groping their way to some business in a strange land among a strange people. The greater part find at last a way into the paths that lead to employment and ability to help themselves, but some do not. Looking about them for some opening where industry may earn its rewards they fail to find it, become discouraged and return to their old homes, if they have the means of doing so, and are forever lost to Oregon. And not only do we lose them, but they become an active power against the State. They have seen but little of Oregon and that little through a [illegible] that colored it to its disadvantage, but their reports will damage the reputation of the country as much as if they were accurate.

Were there only some provision made for receiving the immigrants that come to our shores this might be avoided. A [illegible] to see the immigrants when they first arrive, to ascertain the occupations and purposes of each one, to give to [illegible] information as to where he would be [illegible] likely to find employment in his line, or to find lands suitable to his condition and purposes, to give them a cheerful, kindly, hospitable welcome into our State, this would help wonderfully—help the State, and help the stranger to whom we owe such attentions.

In the absence of such provision by the State, there is a duty upon our people, upon each and every individual. That duty it is hardly necessary to mention, as all must see it at once when brought face to face with the situation. Every Oregonian should interest himself and herself to see that the people that come among us receive a cordial welcome and such assistance and encouragement as can be given. We were all immigrants once, and the most of us remember enough of the hardships and trials of our journey hither, and of the loneliness of our position after our arrival, to enable us to take in at a glance the situation of the immigrant that arrives now. His struggles have not been so great, but his discouragement is not less real than if he had made the half year's march across the desert by which the pioneers reached this far-off land. Put yourself in his place for a moment, and you will not fail to recognize the claims he has upon you. Then give the immigrant your hand. Give him a kindly word. Give him whatever information you can to help him to a place among you. Give him something to do. Give him God speed. It will be time enough to drive hard bargains with him a year or two hence, when he is well on his feet and able to return the compliment, if you must indulge in that sort of thing. Oppress not the stranger that is within your gates.

NO OCCASION FOR INVESTIGATION.

Anonymous correspondents of the Arizona Miner having made damaging charges against Dr. J. A. Towher, Indian Agent, alleging that his report of the unhealthful character of the Rio Verde Reservation was false and made from dishonest motives, the Agent recently sent a communication to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs at Washington calling his attention to the case and asking for an investigation. Commissioner Smith declines to grant the request, but gives a reason for declining, which amounts to a decision sustaining the Agent. He says "the flippant and reckless form in which the complaints are made does not invite serious denial," and that "if any person connected with the Journal, or any other person in Arizona, or elsewhere, can be found who will, over a responsible and reputable signature, renew these complaints," an investigation will be ordered. The Commissioner, it appears to us, is right. It is the fashion of the times to make attacks [illegible] the Indian Department and no opportunity is allowed to go unimproved. [illegible] individuals are assailed, because through them the policy adopted by the Government can be assailed. There would be no end of fruitless and expensive investigations if every anonymous attack upon Indian Agents were made the foundation of official inquiry.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

The Speakership of the next House of Representatives is already a "live issue." [illegible] there is a clear majority of members elected as straightout Democrats, but many of these are not Democrats in anything except the name, having been recognized all through the canvass as outside the discipline of party. This class may be inclined to join with those who were elected under the name of Independents, and select some man for Speaker whose qualifications for the position is fitness for its duties, rather than willingness to be useful to his party. Should this be the case, and should those taking this view have the power to dictate terms, the choice will doubtless fall upon General Banks who distinguished himself as a parliamentarian in the same position in the sessions immediately succeeding the accession of the Republicans to power. The old time Republicans who are Republicans from principle and not from the love of office and plunder, will not be sorry to see Banks again in the Speaker's chair, whether they still maintain their own relationship to the party or not.

The political managers of the Republican party kept sneezing at the well grounded complaints of the people against their corruptions till at last they have sneezed their own heads off. Little's the pity.

AN EXHIBIT OF THE STOCK SWINDLES.

In the New York Tribune of Oct. 6 appeared a letter on the subject of watering railway stock, which, though treating of roads terminating in New York, is equally true of those in other sections. We transcribe a part of the letter in the hope that it may not be considered too abstruse to be carefully studied by every reader of the OREGONIAN, as it is a just and thorough exposition of the utter falsity of the theories on which high charges for freight and fare on railways is based. The public mind, judging by all the public discussions we hear and see, upon the subject does not comprehend the fact that in estimating the capital on which the railways are expected to pay interest, there is included a fictitious capital greater in nearly every instance than the actual cost of the roads, which exists in the form of stock certificates that represent not a dollar of invested money. This added to the actual cost, "capitalizes" the road on a basis of more than twice its actual capital. The writer says:

The plan of creating fictitious capital or water upon railroads appears to have been initiated with the formation of the New York Central Railroad Company in 1853 by the consolidation of the ten separate corporations then owning the roads between the Hudson river and the lakes. The combined amount of share capital and convertible bonds of these separate organizations was then $23 235 000. The equalizing process of the consolidation was that the Schenectady and Troy Company—that being the least productive of all—should come in at par, while the holders of stock or convertible bonds of the other roads received a premium in consolidated six per cent. debt certificates ranging from 17 to 55 per cent., making an issue of these certificates amounting to $8 894 500—or over 30 per cent. on the true share capital of the company. From this time down to 1867 there had been no material change in the total of stock and debt of the New York Central Company other than what could be nearly accounted for by actual value received, and its capital account was then represented by $28 537,000 of stock and $12 069 820 of bonds, a total (including the "water" of 1853) of $40,606,820. The Hudson River Railroad Company at the same time had a share capital of $7 000 000 and a bonded debt of $7,227 000—total, $14 227 000, making these two companies which in 1869 were consolidated stand in 1867 as follows: Stock $35,537 000, and bonds, $19,296 820, or a total capital account of $54 833,820.

During the year 1867 the Hudson River Co. presented its stockholders with $3 500 000 stock, or a dividend of 50 per cent., and again at the time of consolidation another one of 85 per cent. on the then outstanding stock of $16 000 000, making an issue of $13 625,000. The New York Central Company had in 1868 presented its stockholders with the small crumb of $23 080,000, or 80 per cent., followed by one of 27 per cent., $7 775 900, at the time of consolidation. Thus in the space of two years the now New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company added to its capital the small sum of $47 936 000 created out of nothing but the will of its directors and the mixture of paper and printer's ink. From 1870 to 1872 the bonded debt was increased each year from one to two millions of dollars, since which it has been increased some $20,000,000 for purposes of construction. Who shall say if any or how much of this has been additional "water" to make up the necessary amount of $7 200,000 for annual dividends? It will be seen by the foregoing that the known fictitious capital of this Company, including the issue of 1853, is some $70,000,000 [illegible] than the real capital which had been invested down to 1869. Is cheap transportation possible under such conditions? Continuing the line west over the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Co.'s road to Chicago we find additional "water" which has been added between 1861 and 1871 as follows:

Buffalo and Erie	88 miles	$5 400 000
Cleveland, Painesville and Ashtabula	96 miles	6 819 000
Cleveland and Toledo	148 miles	1 250 000
Lake Shore (C. P. and A. and C. and T.)		1 500 000
Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana	587 miles	1 000 000
Lake Shore and Mich. South'n		9 333,333
Total		$25 302 333

Or $302,333 more than half of the present share capital of the Company. The total cost of the above road in 1861 as represented by stocks and bonds and which included some water created in 1856, was only $34,300 000, of which sum the $25 302 333 since added by the printing press is over 70 per cent. Thus we have on this one line of road from this city to Chicago an acknowledged fictitious capital of $82 1[illegible], a sum sufficient to build and thoroughly equip a double track road for the entire distance, a sum calling for about $6 000 000 a year to be paid from the traffic receipts, or in other words $6 000 000 is to be yearly drawn from the people for the payment of dividends and interest on a supposed capital never having had a real existence. Is cheap transportation possible?

No wonder that the subject should be receiving the attention of the merchants of this city as they wake up to the fact that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad are about completing their own line direct into the great grain market of the Northwest, and being capitalized at less than $40 000 per mile, can and will deliver freight at Baltimore at much lower rates than it is possible for our roads capitalized at over $130 000 per mile to deliver it in New York. It has certainly required no extraordinary mathematical ability to comprehend this fact. It is New York's misfortune as well as her fault that her railroads are all so heavily handicapped. In this vast amount of fictitious capital lies one of the obstacles to cheap transportation, and in the Legislature may be one of the remedies. Will it not save time and be better to go immediately after the stolen horse without stopping to lock the empty stable? As before stated, the roads mentioned have been selected only because they were the most conspicuous as the examples of all and not the exception. To maintain that these companies can earn and pay dividends on this vast amount of water only adds to the force of the argument.

Nothing more than a careful study of the facts given in this extract is needed to show that if this "water" is to be counted as capital there is literally no limit to the possible capital of any Company, since capital of this kind is created without the investment of a cent, by the mere passing of a resolution by the board of directors, and issuing certificates ad libitum. It may be added, (and every one will see on a moment's reflection that it is true) that not only are all these subsequent issues "water," but so is every dollar of the original stock which has not been actually paid in by the subscriber. There is scarcely a road in the United States whose official stock is not at least 90 per cent. water and in many cases it is all water, both the original and that subsequently issued.

The people of the sovereign reconstructed State of Louisiana propose to have a general day of thanksgiving for their deliverance from Kellogg. That is right enough perhaps, but we cannot see why the acknowledgment of gratitude to Divine Providence should be confined to the sovereign reconstructed State of Louisiana. The deliverance may be a special providence, but it is of very general application. There are a good many more sovereign reconstructed States in the South that have precisely the same reason to be specially grateful. And even the North might with great propriety lift its unreconstructed voice in praise and thanksgiving, for is not Butlerism one with Kelloggism? Let not our Louisiana brethren in the ecstasy of their delight forget that there are others in the world besides themselves.

Secretary Chadwick writes that our information in regard to his action in connection with the cowardly course pursued by Governor Grover on the railway directors' bill throttled by Cornelius in the interest of Holladay was incorrect, and that he has never exchanged a word with the Governor in reference to the bill. We are truly glad to find the Secretary is not chargeable with any part of the responsibility of this transaction. All who have been privy to the wrong, will hear of it many a time yet, and when the people again speak at the ballot box they will speak so plainly that their betrayers will not fail to understand.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ or organs whose action they derange and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.

The exercises [illegible] with singing by the school and [illegible] Rev W C Chattin. This was followed by reading, in a very successful manner, by C P Yates, one of the teachers, of a selection entitled [illegible] after which the infant class sung in an entertaining manner a "Motion Song" in which some 25 or 30 little ones took a part. This was followed by a recitation in a clear sweet voice by a little girl named Rena Turner, entitled "A Quiet Mind"—[illegible] thoughts well said. Following this came a [illegible] by three little ones, Frankie, E[illegible] and [illegible] Northrup called "The Little [illegible] which was certainly one of the [illegible] of the exercises. Miss Anna Taylor, [illegible] of the teachers, then [illegible] "The Night Before Saul" in a manner [illegible] indicative of considerable ability as a [illegible] and declaimer. Next came the singing of the "Trundle Bed Song," which was rendered in an [illegible] style by Rev W C Chattin. This was followed with a recitation by a class of eight or ten girls, who arose in different parts of the room and told plainly what they knew about "[illegible]" as well as the Bible, which was [illegible] instructive. A duet, by the [illegible] was sweetly sung, one of the [illegible] playing on the organ. A [illegible] of persons who witnessed the [illegible] to the rescue in a state of great [illegible] managed to get hold of the horse, and would probably have [illegible] it had not the animal [illegible] so violently that they found it [illegible] to keep its head above the water until it was drowned. CHIEF ENGINEERS.—As the time is rapidly approaching when the firemen of Portland will be called upon to cast their votes for a Chief Engineer to serve one year from Jan. 1, 1875, it may not be uninteresting to publish the list of persons who have filled that important and responsible position since the organization of the P[illegible] up to the present, and the going into effect of the [illegible] law governing and controlling the [illegible] The following persons have served as Chief Engineer: J [illegible] Webber of No 1, served 1861, 1862 and 1863; Jos. [illegible] FALL.—A Mr T J Stephens, of this city, met with a severe accident on Saturday afternoon which will in all probability result in his partial disablement for life. He was walking rapidly along the sidewalk and stepped upon a short piece of plank. The plank was loose, and the sidewalk being wet and slippery, Mr Stephens had no sooner placed his foot on the piece of treacherous lumber, than it slipped from under him. Suddenly he was pitched forward, the knee of the left leg striking violently against the sidewalk. The cap of the knee was dislocated, and also badly crushed and bruised. Mr Stephens was removed in a helpless condition to the National Hotel and medical aid summoned. From the character of the injuries, it is thought that the limb will be permanently stiff at the knee joint.

MILITARY.—The Idaho Statesman of the 3d inst says: Lieutenants Moss and Domus of the 1st Cavalry, Lieut Hoag and Moore of the 1st Infantry, stationed at Walla Walla, Major Canby, Paymaster from Portland, with Lieuts Rheim and Major Downey, of this place have been holding a Court Martial at Fort Boise [illegible] the last few days. After singing by the school the large audience were dismissed with the Benediction and the officers and teachers were congratulated upon the success of the occasion

DROWNED —On Saturday afternoon a horse, belonging to Mr Kellogg of the National Hotel, backed off a wharf and was drowned. A few minutes prior to the departure of one of the steamers from the wharf at the foot of Oak street, the driver hitched the horse to the wagon, and placing in a trunk started down The trunk was very heavy and on reaching the wharf the driver backed the wagon as near the edge as possible in order to save labor and trouble While backing down, the horse stepped on the upper end of the apron which being wet and slippery, caused the animal to lose its footing and fall. After useless attempts to rise the horse continued to slide down the apron until loosing all control driver vehicle animal and all went headlong down the steep incline on to the boat By the time the boat was reached the momentum was so great as to carry all over the guards and into the river Instantly the horse and wagon sunk, so that the driver who still held fast to the lines, was also carried down and it was with difficulty that he was rescued from drowning A number of persons who witnessed the accident rushed to the rescue in a state of great excitement They managed to get hold of the horse and would probably have succeeded in rescuing it had not the animal struggled and plunged so violently that the men found it impossible to keep its head above the water until it was drowned When the unfortunate animal was dead the harness was cut loose and the wagon hauled up, while the lifeless carcass was floated down stream The horse was a valuable one and the loss falls heavily on the owner who would not have parted with the animal for a large sum of money

TROUBLE AT WRANGEL —A Courier dispatch to the Victoria Colonist, under date of Wrangel, says a petition got up and circulated for signatures to-day by W. K. Lear to Gen Howard, commander of the Department of the Columbia, praying that a detachment of troops be permanently stationed here gave rise to much comment by the miners and others. The general conclusion is that Lear wants to pack and leave if he can succeed in inducing the Government to send troops out, by representing the necessity of soldiers stationed there to drink and play with the Indians For six months previous to the arrival of the present troops there was not a disorderly case but after their arrival there were no less than five free fights and a great number of cases never was known before. Military law won't do for miners, and an attempt to enforce their especially in their whisky, would tend to aggravate the case The last few weeks have proven this beyond a doubt."

NARROW ESCAPE.—Dr Lindsey, while riding out Pine street on Friday, in his buggy with a man, had a very narrow escape Some boys were driving a couple of steers up the street at a very rapid gait The Doctor was also coming down street at a good speed and before he could change the course of his buggy, the horse ran against one of the steers The horse was knocked sprawling and the buggy rolled over the animal's body, and one wheel of the buggy passed over it but the force of the shock, as well as the efforts of the animal to rise, threw the buggy over Of course, both men were hurled to the ground, but fortunately escaped with a few bruises and scratches Luckily the horse attached to the buggy stopped instantly after running against the steer, so it resulted no one was hurt. The buggy was righted and the men getting in drove off.

BAD FALL.—A Mr T J Stephens of met with a severe accident on Saturday which will in all probability result in a partial disablement for life He was walking rapidly along the sidewalk and stepped upon a short piece of plank The plank was loose, and the sidewalk being wet and slippery, Mr Stephens had no sooner placed his foot on the piece of treacherous timber, than it slipped from under him Suddenly he was pitched forward the knee of his left leg striking violently against the sidewalk. The cap of the knee was dislocated and also badly crushed and bruised Mr Stephens was removed in a helpless condition to the National Hotel and medical aid summoned. From the character of the injuries it is thought that the limb will be permanently stiff at the knee joint

JOHN Q. ADAMS AND DANIEL WEBSTER

REMINISCENCES OF THE DEFEAT OF MR ADAMS BY MR WEBSTER FOR THE SENATE

The Providence Journal recalls the following interesting reminiscences of the defeat of two eminent old times men for the Senate The facts recorded show how aspirations for public places are sometimes cut short, and how the less deserving men sometimes get the best places

A noted instance of disappointment in not obtaining a United States Senatorship occurred in Massachusetts in 1835, in the case of John Quincy Adams Nathaniel Silsbee, an old time merchant of princely wealth in the Senate for nine years and tired of public honors, declined a re-election. Mr Adams desired the place He was 68 years of age and his daily life, with but a few brief interruptions, passed in the public service His duration in diplomacy has never been approached in courts at which he represented his country or the variety or importance of the services he rendered He was a native of the State and connected with one of the most illustrious families known in American history

Mr Webster did not want Mr Adams for his colleague and his influence in Massachusetts politics was nearly absolute He had been re elected to the United States Senate but two years before receiving every vote in the State Senate and 432 out of 482 votes in the House The laurels gained by him in his contest with Robert Y Hayne, January 26 1830, were as fresh as when first earned This great production seemed to come just at the right time in that line of judicial opinions which was interspersed by the wonderful discussions of Chief Justice Marshall on questions of constitutional law There were very many people who with a sort of religious conviction looked upon the advent of Mr Webster at this juncture in the light of a special gift to the nation Those who saw him forty years ago will never forget his personal appearance So magnificent a development physically and mentally mortal eye is seldom permitted to rest upon It was at this period that his political adversaries bestowed upon him the appellation of the God like '

At the election for Senator Feb 17, 1835 each House voting separately, in the lower branch Gov Davis received 302 votes, Mr Adams 171 and there were 69 scattering Mr Davis was thus elected on the first ballot On the 10th, when the Senate was to act upon the question an extraordinary interest was manifested in the result. Strong hopes were entertained by the friends of Mr Adams that he would obtain a majority in the Senate, thereby producing a disagreement between the two Houses The Senate was densely crowded with spectators anxious to witness the ballot ing Thirty nine Senators all but one were present Mr Adams received three votes on the first ballot, and not one afterward Three more ballots were taken, and on the third John Davis was elected by one majority No Senatorial defeat was ever more complete Mr Adams never forgave Mr Webster for what he termed an act of personal hostility and on several public occasions took especial pains to manifest in pointed terms an unabated spirit of revenge Both were in public life many years after this date, and when they happened to meet it was with a slight recognition, and the exhibition of a courtesy deeply tinged with icy coldness Mr Adams has been dead nearly 27 years (February 23 1848) and Mr Webster followed him less than five years after ward (October 23 1852) and so far as human observation is allowed to penetrate it may be assumed that their resentments here were buried only in the silence of the grave

The Effects of Dosing.

Many persons who are wanting in natural vigor endeavor to supply the deficiency by constantly dosing themselves with drugs (often of a very pernicious nature) which they are credulous enough to mistake for invigorants There can be no doubt that many lives are shortened in this way All that such persons require is a pure vegetable tonic which like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters also possesses the regulating properties necessary to rectify those organic disturbances which are but the result of weakness. The feeble and the nervous cannot be too earnestly advised to abandon the dangerous practice of swallowing mineral tonics, relatives and vegetable alkaloids which disorder the stomach and produce the most hurtful reactions and to substitute in their place this standard strengthening cordial and corrective of the numerous disorders proceeding from debility of the nervous system, as well as of the stomach liver and bowels

LONE MOUNTAIN

A lone low City on the hill
Lies in the shadows cool and still
Graceland! a land with musings rife
Whose dwellers fled the noise of life
The discords of an irksome strife
Tread lightly speak in whispers lest
You wake the pilgrims from their rest

No gaudy trappings fill these rooms,
Hid by the grass and daisy blooms,
Broadcloth and velvet, pearls and lace,
The azure blood of ancient race
The scornful beauty of the face—
These are of a fading past,
Along that land no shadows cast.

The soundless silence is not stirred
By any base or evil word
If [illegible] claims this one spot
All pride and selfishness forgot,
He's some had Gold and others not—
No rank—no precedence they boast
One pale innumerable host.

And even those we loved the best
Who sought this silent Land of Rest
Hid from us by the crystal spheres
They answer not to eyes or ears
Not even though we come in tears—
Once joined as close as heart to heart
How wide a space we stand apart?

Death spectral bark in mystery
Fades darkling down an unknown sea
Alone The City on the hill
Wrapped in soft shadows cool and still
Calms the rude turbulence of Will—
Rests aching brain and throbbing heart
In what far dreams from Time apart

Life's fitful fever sudden ceased
[illegible] faces looking to the East,
[illegible] the ages lapsing slow,
While other races come and go
In Summer bloom or Winter snow
Like children to a mother's breast
Shall come and share their silent rest

ANOTHER WARNING

SENATOR MORTON'S MOUTHPIECE SAYS IF THE PRESIDENT WILL NOT DISAVOW THE THIRD TERM SCHEME [illegible] IT MUST—HIS RE ELECTION WOULD [illegible]

From the Indianapolis Journal (Senator Morton's [illegible])

Almost at the beginning of the agitation of the third term question the Journal took strong ground against it and deprecated the introduction of the question into our politics. It has been introduced, however and persistently agitated. The silence of the President has encouraged his misguided friends to press the matter until it has become a [illegible] element of current discussion and a very damaging weapon against the Republican party. The President could have stopped the discussion long ago by a single word and in our opinion he should have spoken it. He owed it to himself and to [illegible] to put a speedy end to an agitation which was doing so much to injure both. His silence has injured him because the people have construed it into an approval on his part of the third term suggestion and it has injured the Republican party because in the popular mind that party is held responsible for the agitation. President Grant is the keeper of his own reputation and may injure it in speaking or keeping silent as he chooses but he has no right to allow the Republican party to be stabbed over his shoulder when he can arrest the process by the utterance of a single word. He has either misinterpreted the popular feeling on this subject or has not thought it a matter of any importance or has not cared to save the Republican party from the great damage which was being inflicted upon it. In either case he has made a great mistake, and the time has now come for the Republican party itself, so far as it is possible to rectify that mistake by washing its hands of the third term business. As the President has not seen fit to disavow it the Republican party should do so, and as a [illegible] of Republican opinion The Journal here and now declares the third term [illegible] to be impolitic anti republican and offensive to the popular mind. It is [illegible] for President Grant to be re-elected. The party that nominates him will be ignominiously defeated. It is not only impossible for him to be re-elected but not desirable if it were possible. His re-election would not conduce to the elevation of American politics or to the inauguration of such an era of reform as can alone [illegible] the Republican party to popular confidence. There is but one way to meet this question. If President Grant does not speak out before the meeting of Congress in December, the Republicans in Congress must express the [illegible] of the party [illegible] this third-term business. If they had done this last winter the Republican party would have been in much better shape to day. This is one of the things that must be done

VIEWS OF A CABINET OFFICER.

(Washington Cor N Y Evening Post.)

"There is no use in trying to misconstrue the popular will as indicated by the elections last Tuesday," said [illegible] of the Cabinet "for if it means anything it is that the people of this country do not intend to have a third-term P[illegible] and the sooner we recognize this state of facts the better will it be for the Administration and Republican party, and the stronger will they be[illegible]" The views thus briefly expressed are shared by many of the closest and warmest supporters of the Administration and the current has set so strongly in this direction [illegible] believed that President G[illegible] will [illegible] silence all further agitation of this question by an authoritative statement or letter soon after his return from the West.

THE APOTHEOSIS OF CAPT JACK

One might suppose that Capt. Jack, the Modoc brave being hanged dead, and buried would no more disturb the earth. But his apotheosis vexed a Boston audience last Sunday night. The occasion was a meeting for discussion of ways and means for the improvement of the condition of the Indian. A clerical gentleman, locally known as Father Gleason eulogized Capt Jack and defended his shooting of Gen Canby and Commissioner Thomas. Col. Meacham who was one of the Commissioners in that tragic affair and was severely wounded [illegible] the reverend eulogist advanced this ultra humanitarian view of the doings of Capt Jack. He stood up and [illegible] that he took no part in any such [illegible] and declared that the assassination of Canby and Thomas was a dastardly outrage. To this Father Gleason replied that he [illegible] Meacham was a political adventurer and that if he had offered to Capt. Jack the terms the President had desired, General Canby and Commissioner Thomas would not have been shot. To this curious argument Colonel Meacham made no rejoinder. Probably he thought that the charge of being a political adventurer had no [illegible] connection with the argument. Confusion [illegible] in the [illegible] and the perturbed spirit of Captain Jack probably pleased with the disturbance which he had created in the white man's meeting, subsided once more.

The reappearance of this turbulent ragamuffin is however a good example of the persistence of what we call the Indian question. It will not down. In this case some well meaning but misguided people of whom Father Gleason is a type, were anxious to testify to their belief in Captain Jack as a martyr and in the abstract Indian as a deeply injured being. Indeed, we are not sure but that Col Meacham, who entertains what may be considered advanced views upon this subject was present at the Boston meeting for the purpose of giving countenance to the proceedings as a friend of humanity. The enthusiastic defense of Capt Jack was too much for his sense of justice however and he bolted from the conclave. To the complexion of Father Gleason and his following all sentimentalists who deal with the Indian question must come at last. They will not abide with Gen Sherman's opinion that it is better to feed the red men than to fight them; they insist upon coddling him and treating with him as if he had ten centuries of civilization behind him instead of the meagre results of a very doubtful experiment in that direction. It is true that some appeal may be made to the Indian's reason and knowledge of right and wrong, but behind that appeal must always be kept in plain sight the military power of the United States Government. If the Modoc war taught us anything it taught us this. Capt Jack is in his grave, the Modoc war is done, let the [illegible] of that tragical chapter of this [illegible] with him. We are learning as the Indian [illegible] Capt Jack's [illegible]

Latest Liverpool advices denote a quiet market. Pacific coast wheat range 1 from [illegible] 10s 4d for average and 10s 4d @ 10s 10d for club per cental. The London market is quoted at 44s 6d per quarter for average quality just shipped and [illegible] per quarter for average nearly due at Queenstown.

But little has shown itself to day in local money matters worthy of note. The city banks are apparently doing about the usual amount of business and no change in rates is reported, though accommodations are hardly so free as heretofore, and the closeness is more likely to increase than otherwise until the bulk of the crops is moved and the currency [illegible] of the country begins to return to the ordinary channels of trade.

A New York dispatch of Oct 31st indicates a continued dullness in general trade and the season is now so far advanced that no substantial revival can be reasonably expected until the opening of spring trade but in the meantime all the signs of the times are in favor of much more wholesome business when the business does revive. The stagnation [illegible] which so much is heard is more apparent than real. The volume of transactions as shown by the commercial reviewers is not very far below the usual average at this season of the year. The decline in speculation and rigid economy as regards articles of pure luxury account for much of the stagnation complained of. As compared with active seasons of recent years the volume of trade is indeed light and margins of profit small but if comparisons be instituted with ante-war periods, the showing would be more satisfactory albeit the expenses of conducting business are much greater now than then and by consequence net profits are less. Much of the talk about dull times moreover may be set down to disappointment of merchants [illegible] because their profit account is not equal to what it was during the eight or nine years preceding the panic.

The coinage at the United States Mint in San Francisco last month amounted to $3,204,000 including $1,7[illegible],000 in Double Eagles and $[illegible] 000 in Trade Dollars. In the same month last year the amount was $2 6[illegible] 000 including $2 [illegible] 000 in Double Eagles $120 000 in Eagles $110 000 in Half Eagles $50,000 in Quarter Eagles and [illegible] in Trade Dollars. Since the reopening of the Mint in July the coinage has amounted to $12 403 000 including $11,500 000 in gold and $[illegible]3 000 in silver. Business of the Mint will be removed this week to the fine new building erected expressly for that purpose on Fifth street. The officers feel elated at the prospect of leaving their present dingy quarters. The Mint was established in 1853. Since then the total coinage has been $[illegible] in gold and $11 496,400 in silver a total of $[illegible]. The new Mint building is said to be the largest and best appointed institution of the kind in the world.

[illegible] Market.

In our local markets to day there has been rather a decline than an increase in the volume of transactions, with but few changes in values. Wheat is still coming forward rapidly selling at $1 [illegible] per cental. Oats dull at 40c per bushel. Flour unchanged. [illegible] and a scarcity noticed in some lines. Vegetables and fruits of all kinds are plentiful and offering at prices which bring them within the reach of all [illegible] but equally depressed markets elsewhere retard shipments, and the current demand is not at all brisk.

In imported goods trade is only moderately active and orders are coming forward more slowly than one week ago. Some dealers are a good deal dissatisfied with the result of the fall's business so far while others have been prosperous the whole year and are in good heart. All goods in this class have borne steady prices, [illegible] hardware, farming machinery and dry goods. Groceries have [illegible] considerably and though the margins on them have at times been larger than on the goods mentioned before, the net result in them has not been so satisfactory. At present sugars and syrups and coffees are firm and likely to advance still further during the winter. Other [illegible] articles are unchanged.
